Docket Number: HHS-OASH-2024-0017-0001

Dear Janet de Jesus,

On behalf of Compassion in World Farming and 5,897 supporters (signatures are below), we write to support the inclusion of the 2025 Dietary Guidelines Advisory Committee's (the Committee) recommendations in the 2025-2030 Dietary Guidelines for Americans. Compassion in World Farming is a nonprofit, nonpartisan organization whose mission is to create a healthier, more sustainable, and more ethical food system by transitioning away from industrialized animal agriculture toward regenerative, pasture-based, and diverse food production.

We specifically urge the US Department of Agriculture and the Department of Health and Human Services to adopt following recommendations from the Committee's Scientific Report in the final 2025-2030 Dietary Guidelines for Americans to both improve clarity and better align with scientific consensus:

1. Move Beans, Peas, and Lentils from the Vegetable Food category to the Protein Foods Category.
2. Reorganize the Protein Foods Group in the following order: 1) Beans, Peas, and Lentils, 2) Nuts, Seeds, and Soy Products, 3) Seafood, 4) Meat, Poultry, and Eggs.
3. Encourage replacement animal-based saturated fat foods, including butter and red meat, with plant-based foods, oils and spreads rich in monounsaturated fatty acid (MUFA), polyunsaturated fatty acids (PUFA), and fiber.
4. Increase the weekly amount of beans, peas, and lentils.
5. Reduce Total Protein Foods by reducing the weekly amount of meat, poultry, and eggs.
6. Add explicit language encouraging dietary patterns that emphasize plant-based foods, including plant-based proteins (beans, peas, lentils, nuts, seeds, and soy), whole grains, and vegetables.

We also support the Committee's proposed Eat Healthy Your Way dietary pattern as a means of promoting health equity across races, socioeconomic levels, and cultures.

The 2025 Committee cited multiple conclusions indicating that reducing intake of meat and animal-sourced fats and increasing intake of plant-based foods is better for overall health, including:

- strong evidence that lower intakes of red and processed meat were associated with reduced risk of cardiovascular disease and type 2 diabetes.
- strong evidence that replacing butter with plant-based oils and spreads higher in unsaturated fat improves lipid profiles for lower cardiovascular risk.

- moderate evidence that replacing red meats with plant proteins, whole grains, and vegetables were related to lower long-term risks of cardiovascular disease.
- moderate evidence that lower intakes of red and processed meats are associated with reduced risk of postmenopausal breast cancer, colorectal cancer, and cognitive decline.
- moderate evidence that reduced intake of all meats reduced the risk of obesity.

Sadly, the current Dietary Guidelines and the nutrition education and food assistance programs they inform are failing to keep Americans healthy and prevent diet-related disease. The United States has the highest meat consumption per capita in the world and some of the highest prevalences of type 2 diabetes, prediabetes, cardiovascular diseases, and overweight/obesity, at roughly 10%, 38%, 50%, and 73%, respectively, among adults.^{1,2,3} Furthermore, cardiovascular diseases continue to be a leading cause of death in the United States, with heart disease as the leading cause and stroke as the fifth leading cause.⁴ These conditions cause economic productivity loss, financial stress, and untold physical and emotional suffering for affected individuals and their families. Therefore, we believe that any interventions that can prevent these morbidities and deaths must be prioritized in public health education initiatives and be the central focus of the 2025-2030 Dietary Guidelines to protect the American people.

Additionally, making the above changes in the 2025-2030 Dietary Guidelines can improve the effectiveness of government food programs providing complete nutrition and reducing the programs' potential contribution to diet-related disease. One in four Americans participate in federal nutrition programs each year, making them a critical component of diet-related disease prevention. Not only do these programs shape daily nutrient intake, but they also shape eating habits that will follow individuals for years to come. Programs such as the National School Breakfast and Lunch Programs—which follow the current Dietary Guidelines—have little capacity to provide healthier food for students. One audit of California public school lunch offerings found that only 11% of entrees were plant-based in 2023 (up from only 7% in 2019), and that 14% of entrees featured processed meats. Moreover, over 50% of schools had either no plant-based entrees at all or nut butter and jelly sandwiches as the only plant-based option.⁵ The National School Breakfast and Lunch programs and others are critical to providing adequate nutrition to individuals both during high growth periods and during a time when their dietary habits are forming, which will follow them into adulthood. The Dietary Guidelines also inform meals and menus for hospital patients and medical staff, military personnel at bases, and other individuals for whom healthy meals are essential to their optimum function, safety, and recovery. Thus, it is imperative that the next iteration of the Dietary Guidelines facilitate meals and menu planning in line with healthy eating patterns so that Americans who rely on these programs can have fair access to healthy foods.

Commented [AC1]: I would challenge this statement, while the food isn't as healthy as it could be, it is often the most nutritionally dense meal student receive throughout the day. "Rife" is a strong word, and denotes corrupt intent on food providers. The problem lies within the guidelines themselves and the way schools are reimbursed for meals.

Suggested edit: "Guidelines--have little capacity to provide healthier food for students."

Commented [AM2R1]: oh yes, that's much better! Thank you!

The 2015 Dietary Guidelines Advisory Committee came to similar conclusions as the 2025 Committee regarding red and processed meat overconsumption and even expanded their research to incorporate excessive meat production's additional public health harms caused by environmental impact.⁶ However, in 2015, meat industry trade groups collectively spent over $1.1 million to successfully lobby the Biden Administration and Congress to dilute and obscure recommendations regarding meat consumption in the 2015-2020 Dietary Guidelines.⁷ Ten years later, the evidence from dozens of scientific studies, international bodies such as the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO), World Health Organization (WHO), and EAT-Lancet Forum, and from the Committees is still clear: diets high in meat and low in legumes, nuts, seeds, whole grains, and vegetables are harmful to human health.⁸ And yet, thousands of Americans continue to suffer and die each year from preventable diet-related diseases on our government's watch.

We cannot let people and corporations with private financial interests continue to push around government leaders and corrupt public health initiatives. We trust the expertise, research, and analysis by the 2025 Committee members and the Committees before them. Thus, we urge the USDA and HHS to incorporate their recommendations in full into the 2025-2030 Dietary Guidelines for Americans.

Sincerely,
